

For some light relief, try this article by Financial Times journalist Chris Giles, who has a novel suggestion about how to kick-start the housing market, which is no more daft than most of the proposals being put forward seriously.